PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. The return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Performance figures are net of fees and charges. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus.

FUND COMMENTARY

World equity markets delivered excellent returns over the 2017 calendar year. This materialised despite turbulent events on the world geopolitical stage. Heated exchanges between the U.S. and North Korean heads of state over the latter's growing nuclear threats caused material tension in global capital markets. Following a prolonged period of converging to the political centre, 2017 saw growing fragmentation to the left and to the right, especially in parts of Europe. This heightened political uncertainty. Tensions in the Middle East also kept flaring up.

The 2017 equity market performance has shown clearly that investors are more concerned with the global economic landscape and the specific investment merits of individual businesses, rather than geopolitical uncertainties. While political threats remain to be just that, rather than 'acts of war', strategically orientated investors focus more on the economic realities in their decision making.

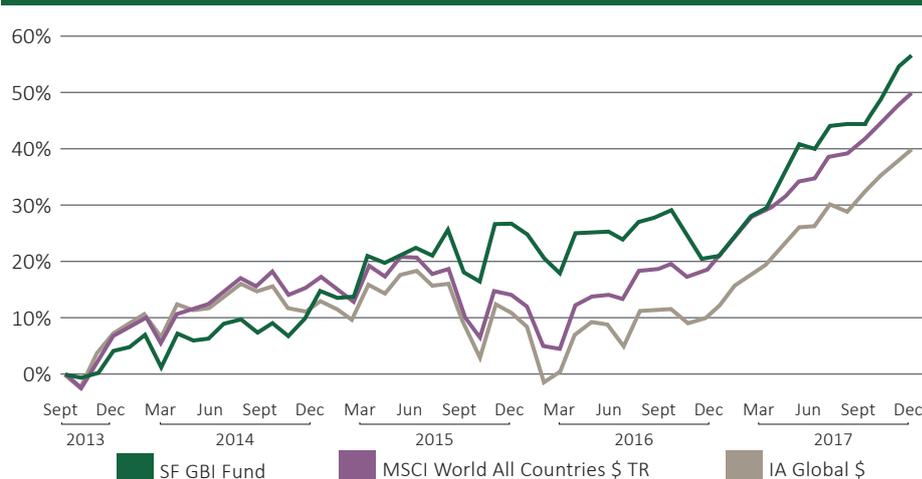

The main economic issues that supported capital markets in 2017 can be condensed to the weaker U.S. dollar currency and continuing low inflation. The former supports US exports and world trade to quite an extent. It also eases the debt burden for many emerging markets, whilst stimulating better commodity prices. U.S. industrial production accelerated for the first time after two years of contraction, with similar experiences in other main economies. World trade followed this pattern through 2017, and economic growth picked up moderately from 2016. S&P 500 company earnings started to accelerate after two years of stagnation, with consensus 2018 expectations now at double digit growth levels. Core inflation remained subdued through 2017, with the effect that interest rates also stayed at moderate levels despite the Federal Reserve's three further tightening steps. Interest rate differentials continue to indicate low future inflation expectations.

This constructive economic and business environment supports equity valuations at higher than historic levels. Geopolitical risks can only be dealt with if and when they may become reality.
