PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. The return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Performance figures are net of fees and charges. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus.

FUND COMMENTARY

The first quarter of 2019 delivered the best first quarter returns since the turn of the century for both the Fund's comparative MSCI ACTR and the S&P 500 indices. Both indices have, though, not yet reached their respective peak levels registered last year.

Despite this positive backdrop, financial headlines are littered with news of the US yield curve inverting and the implied risks of an imminent US recession. Some perspectives in this context may be of value.

That the yield curve has inverted (and then flattened again) reflects the drop of long rates (10-years or longer) below the very short rates (up to 3 months) rather than below the more fundamentally based 2-year rate levels. Whilst we do not perceive yield curves based on short rates as fundamentally too well founded, an analysis of a number of such curves nevertheless indicate the possibility of an US recession about 24 months in the future.

The more fundamentally based yield curves are in process of flattening but have not yet inverted. If they may flatten and then immediately invert, it may signal the next US recession to be about 23 months away (considering data around the three most recent recessions). The S&P 500 index has historically peaked shortly before the respective recessions started. The average lead time over the last five recessions has been 4 months.

We studied the average S&P 500 return levels after 12, 18 and 24 months following the more fundamental 2/10-year curve inversions. They were +16%, +17% and +20% respectively ($-terms, excluding dividends). The lowest individual figure was -2% (after 18 months in the case of the 1980 inversion event).

We do not attempt to forecast equity markets but see it as our duty to seriously consider the risks of staying invested. The current headlines of yield inversion do not yet force us onto the proverbial side-lines.
