PERFORMANCE DISCLOSURE

Past performance is not a guide to future performance. The value of investments can fall. Investors may not get back the amount invested. Income from investments may vary and is not guaranteed. The return may increase or decrease due to currency fluctuations. Performance figures are net of fees and charges. The Fund may hold a relatively small number of stocks as compared to many other funds. This may make the Fund's performance more volatile than would be the case if it had a more diversified investment portfolio. For a full list of risks applicable to this fund, please refer to the Prospectus.

FUND COMMENTARY

Investor fears during October of rising risks of spiking US inflation and interest rates did not come to fruition in November. The latest readings for the most important measurements of core inflation, private consumer expenditure and the breakeven rate are all lower than in October. The Federal Reserve have also indicated that they do not have reason to be overly aggressive in further tightening. Stock market volatility also softened in November and ended the month on its average level during the current equity bull market.

Global economic expansion remains on a constructive course, with the US by far in the strongest position amongst the main regions. The respective economic outlooks as reflected by the Purchasers' Manufacturing Indices (PMI's) are all at or above the critical 50 expansionary reading levels. Europe's reading is receding the sharpest and emerging markets and China have the lowest readings, marginally in expansionary territory. The US's reading seems to be rolling over at elevated levels, but this has historically not lead to imminent structural stock market weakness.

These lower PMI readings indicate that global synchronised economic growth may have matured and that economic disruptions may become more harmful. Continuing growing world trade and the implied risks of increasing trade tariffs have particular relevance in this context. The volume of world trade is currently growing in excess of 2%, despite the strong Dollar. The value of Chinese exports and world imports are both growing in double digits. Investors fear that these constructive trends can be at risk have become the proverbial last straw that can strain frail investor sentiment.

We are at an interesting global economic juncture in that China is still treated as an emerging market even though it is the world's second largest economy. The trade truce reached between them and the US over the weekend in Buenos Aires, agreeing not to implement the higher trade tariffs on 1 January 2019 to allow further negotiations, is a positive step to support world trade.
